3 Institution, address, e-mail, ORCID

Suggested sections: Introduction, Literature Review, Methodology and Data, Results, Conclusions, Acknowledgments, References.

Introduction

The introduction outlines the context of the paper, highlights the importance of the topic, identifies gaps in the existing literature, clarifies the aim and contribution of the paper, and presents the structure of the article.

Literature Review

The Literature Review should provide a comprehensive overview of existing research relevant to the topic, critically analyze key studies and identify gaps or inconsistencies in the literature.

Methodology and Data

The Methodology and Data section should detail the research design, explain the methods and techniques used for data collection and analysis, describe the data sources and sample characteristics.

Results

The Results section should summarize the main outcomes of the research, include appropriate visual aids such as charts and tables to illustrate the data, emphasize significant trends or relationships found.

Tables and figures should be centered, avoid placing figures and tables before their first mention in the text.

Table titles should be clear, placed above the table, in Arial font size 11, bold, centered alignment, with 6 pt spacing after.

Equations should be centered in the column. Number equations consecutively with equation numbers in parenthesis on the right side.

Equation (1), (2), ... (n)

Symbols in every equation should be defined before the equation appears.

Only sources for which references are used in the text will be included in the bibliography.

Citations of authors/works will be made in the text (not as footnotes) and will have the following general form: (Author, year).

The authors' notes could be placed either as footnotes or as endnotes.

Conclusions

The Conclusions section should succinctly summarize the main findings, discuss their implications and significance, acknowledge any limitations of the study and propose directions for future research.

Acknowledgments

The Acknowledgments section expresses gratitude to individuals, organizations, or institutions that contributed support, resources, or guidance during the completion of the work.

References

The References should provide a complete and accurately formatted list of all sources cited in the paper, including books, journal articles, websites, and other relevant materials, consistently following the APA citation style (<https://apastyle.apa.org/style-grammar-guidelines/references>).

The references must be presented in alphabetical order, following the example below:
